SUMMER splash

Check out what's on tap for us this summer!

WATER SKI June - October

We've been working with the Radar River Rats on our summer water ski trips. We have once again scheduled nine trips for June through October. We set camp up on our own beach on the Colorado River at the Needles Marina. Equipment and instructions are included. Details, dates and cost can be found on page 20.

BIKING summer fun

I've been checking out some intermediate bike trails in the San Diego area and have a bunch of ideas for combining biking with picnics and other fun. For instance, we could ride around Mission Bay and end at The Pennant for 1/2 price beer and food. Interested? Just give me a call or drop me an email.

BIG WHITE opening and closing

We will again offer two trips to Big White in British Columbia, Canada. We love Big White and love the early and late ski season there. We will be flying into Kelowna and staying slope side at the White Crystal Inn for 7 nights.

Lodging, lift tickets, nightly après ski parties and transportation to/from Kelowna are included for the low price of $699 per person for the week based on double occupancy.

You are on your own to get air. United is now flying round trip out of Los Angeles for about $325. Alaska & Air Canada have flights from LA and San Diego. West Jet is also available out of Las Vegas and Los Angeles. See page 23 for trip details.

SESTRIERE italy

Be sure to check out Pac Rim's trip to Sestriere, Italy with an extension to Cinque Terre, March 8-20, 2014. The price is $1,699 for Sestriere and $499 for Cinque Terre. This does not include the airline taxes, lift tickets, rentals, lunches and dinners in Cinque Terre. See page 22 for details.

FWSA convention

The recent FWSA convention was a great success. We had a blast coordinating the Pub Crawl. The highlight of the convention was the awards. Catherine was presented the President's Award for all of the free time she donates to Far West and for her years of work on the convention slide show.

Pacific Rim was also awarded the first place Tollakson Award (best ski club) and Wentworth Award (newsletter) and second place Web Site Award for Class AA category (around 150 members). Another trick hat for Pac Rim! Congratulations everyone.

Rather than presenting plaques, which end up in drawers or garages, Far West has issued digital icons as seen above.

Wishing that everyone have a fun and sporting summer!

It's been a busy year for Connie, Zac, Sienna and Brooke. And now Connie is back to full time teaching.

Sean Griffin graduated from HS and is off to Mt. Sac in Walnut, CA.

Delaney & Isabella are growing up too fast. We really missed seeing them this year and can't wait to teach them to ski next year. Also looking forward to skiing with Logan (HS Senior) and Bailey (first year in middle school).

Top EMERGING Ski Towns

National Geographic rates the top 10 up-and-comer resorts in the West

These western North American ski towns may not have the name recognition of the world's best-known destinations, but these are the local's favorites and up-and-comers. They're real towns, often cheaper and friendlier than the big dogs—at least for now. If you're on the hunt for great skiing without the crowds and glitz, read on.

—Aaron Teasdale

Ogden, Utah

Photograph by Steve Lloyd, The New York Times/Redux.

Best for Utah powder seekers who don't like crowds.

Long overshadowed by its larger cousin to the south, Ogden sits only 40 miles north of Salt Lake City's international airport and its two primary mountains—Snowbasin and Powder Mountain—have the same ethereal powder as the heralded resorts in Cottonwood Canyon without the pesky crowds that track everything out by lunch.

Reno, Nevada

Photograph by Grant Gunderson, Tandem.

Best for mixed groups of hard chargers, beginners, and nonskiers who'd rather do their gambling off the slopes.

This historic gold-mining town at the foot of the Sierra Nevada Mountains became one of America's 20th-century gambling meccas before its current reinvention as a hip, outdoorsy city of university students, artists, and, yes, skiers. Mount Rose is 25 miles from downtown, but Reno sits at the northern tip of Lake Tahoe's constellation of ski areas as well—the densest concentration of ski resorts in North America. There are 18 resorts within a hundred miles of Reno's international airport.

Revelstoke, British Columbia

Photograph by Grant Gunderson, Tandem.

Best for vertical-devouring powder hounds with movie-star ambitions.

Consider 5,620 feet of vertical—that's pretty much all you need to know to understand why Revelstoke Mountain Resort has burst onto the North American ski scene with more fanfare than any ski area in recent memory. The average 350 to 550 inches of snow per year doesn't hurt either. But it's more than just obscene amounts of snow and vertical—the town of Revelstoke, only three miles from the mountain's base, is an old mining hamlet cum ski town in the grand tradition of Colorado's finest (Crested Butte, Telluride, etc.).

Nelson, British Columbia

Photograph by Douglas Noblet, Getty Images.

Best for those seeking an off-thetrodden path, powder-smothered destination that's more about relaxed authenticity than thread count.

Resting on the shores of Kootenay Lake and tucked into the steep, wooded folds of the Selkirk Mountains, the funky hamlet of Nelson has long harbored artists, adventure seekers, and copious, car-concealing amounts of snow. The colorful downtown consists of meticulously restored historic buildings packed with eclectic restaurants. Ten miles from town sits the quietly epic Whitewater Ski Resort, a hidden gem of British Columbia skiing. Situated in a mountain bowl that grabs snow like a giant catcher's mitt, you don't come here for glitz and high-speed chairs (none and none).

Sandpoint, Idaho

Best for non-extreme skiers and boarders seeking the famed tree skiing of the Selkirks without the trip to Canada.

Deep in the Idaho panhandle the backwoods logging town of Sandpoint has been transformed into a ski town and a bohemian artists' haven of wineries and sushi bars. Eleven miles north of town, Schweitzer Mountain Resort sprawls across 2,900 acres and offers some of the best lift-accessed backcountry in the Rockies. The ski area itself is a non-extreme skier's dream, with wide ribbons of corduroy and unending glades draped across its three peaks.

Driggs, Idaho

Photograph by Gabe Rogel, Aurora.

Best for families seeking virtually guaranteed powder in a salt-of-the-earth ski town.

In Idaho's rural Teton Valley at the skirts of the vaulting Teton Mountains, the small ranching town of Driggs is slowly filling with skiers and snowboarders there to dive into some of North America's best and most consistent powder snorkling. Driggs is 42 miles and one mountain pass from its flashier relative, Jackson Hole. 12 miles outside of town, Grand Targhee catches an average of 500 inches of snow each year on its 2,602 acres

Mammoth, California

Photograph by Lee Donahoe, Tandem

Best for cliff huckers and park rats looking for California sunshine.

High in California's Sierra Nevada, in the shadow of Yosemite, the volcano of Mammoth Mountain rises above the tree line to 11,053 feet and delivers the highest lift-served skiing west of the Rockies. This means two things: wideopen alpine terrain and lighter snow than anywhere else in the region. The recent development of the Village at Mammoth has given Mammoth a lively pedestrian center. The mountain itself lives up to its name with 150 runs, 28 lifts (half of which are high-speed), three base lodges, and a plethora of pitches for every level across its 3,500 acres. Terrain diversity is the key here.

Red Lodge, Montana

Photograph by Paul Otsu, Red Lodge Mountain Resort.

Best for families looking for an inexpensive Rocky Mountain ski vacation.

With its family-friendly mountain, glorious spring skiing, and laid-back character recalling the Aspen of 40 years ago, the little western town of Red Lodge has guietly become one of the best under-the-radar ski towns in the Rockies. This was the stomping ground of Buffalo Bill and Calamity Jane, and the historic downtown hasn't changed much since. Six miles out of town, Red Lodge Mountain Resort rises 2,400 feet up Grizzly Peak. At 1,600 acres and 65 runs, it's not a huge ski area, but it has the whole family covered, from gentle beginner runs to 2.5-mile-long groomers to double-black tree skiing in the mountain's upper reaches.

Durango, Colorado

Photograph by Scott Smith, Durango Mountain Resort.

Best for budget-minded families with multisport inclinations and a taste for the Southwest.

Renowned for its world-class mountain biking and kayaking, Durango also happens to be a vibrant, family-friendly ski town—perhaps the most affordable in Colorado. This Old West railroad town has blossomed into one of America's adventure sports capitals. Twenty-seven miles up Highway 550 is Durango Mountain Resort, née Purgatory, a family and intermediate skier's dream hill, with 88 runs, ten lifts, five terrain parks, and a seemingly endless supply of groomed rollers for catching flight.

YOGA for cyclists & skiers

Four Yoga Moves for a Pain-Free Spine

You expect sore quads, calves, and glutes after copious saddle time. But according to a study in the American Journal of Sports Medicine, back pain is the most common overuse injury reported by cyclists.

Even if you don't pin on a race number every weekend, simple yoga-based stretches align your spine; relieve back, neck, and shoulder pain; and create flexibility in your upper body.

Do this sequence two or three times a week to keep your back going strong.

Tilt and Hold

Sit up tall in a chair with your back straight and your feet flat on the floor. Bend your head and neck forward as far as possible, keeping your shoulders down. Lace your fingers together behind your head, elbows out to the sides, and press gently on the back of your head. Hold for eight deep breaths, then release. Repeat three times.

Eagle Arm Pose

Stay seated and extend your arms in front of you at shoulder level. Cross your left arm over your right, raise your forearms perpendicular to the floor, and twist your palms inward until they touch. Inhale and raise your arms slightly; exhale and lower. That's one rep. Do five; unwind, switch arms and repeat.

Spinal Twist

Cat-Cow

Start on all fours, back flat, eyes focused on the floor. Inhale. As you exhale, round your spine like a cat, drop your head, and tuck your chin toward your chest. Inhale, then arch your back toward the floor, lifting your hips, tailbone and chest toward the ceiling, directing your gaze upward. Exhale as you return to cat pose. Do the sequence 10 times.

boat SAFETY

Carbon Monoxide

"Teak surfing" or being dragged closely behind a boat is illegal and can be deadly! Those being dragged can inhale the colorless, odorless, tasteless and DEADLY gas called Carbon Monoxide. Avoid the death zones!

Swimming near or under the back deck or swim platform while the motor is running is dangerous. You can inhale Carbon Monoxide.

Did you know that all boats need to display a Carbon Monoxide safety sticker on their boat? You can obtain the sticker from the California Department of Boating and Waterways.

Drinking

Bring your life jacket, but leave the alcohol at home. The side effects of alcohol – impaired judgment, reduced balance, poor coordination – can be magnified by the boating environment.

Designating a driver is not enough on boats. Drunken passengers on boats can easily fall overboard, swim near the propeller or cause loading problems by leaning over the side or standing up in small vessels, causing vessels to capsize. If you do drink, wear a life jacket.

what you need to KNOW

SKI technology explained

Rocker, or reverse camber, is finding its way into more and more skis.

Excerpted Peter Kray, onthesnow.com.

Are you looking to buy new skis this season. To ensure you don't walk into a shop unprepared this fall, what follows is a Dictionary of Ski Construction Terminology.

Rocker

Truth be told, rocker has existed since skis were first built with tips. The rise in a ski's shovel is technically rocker, and it helps the ski do everything from deflect cut-up snow and death cookies to provide a transition point on which to tip the ski into its arc.

Rocker, as it's marketed today, is simply an exaggerated rise in the ski's tip. Same with the tail of a ski, where increased rocker can make it easier to transition out of a turn.

Also commonly called early rise, reverse camber, and even pre-bent, rocker's exaggerated rise can make it dramatically easier to a roll a ski into the turn without having to aggressively pressure the tip.

The more subtle the rocker or early rise, the more effectively a ski will grip the snow once it is put on edge.

The more pronounced the rocker, the more likely a ski is designed for hitting the kind of powder you find riding snowcats or hiking out the backcountry.

Camber

Camber is the upward flexing arc beneath a ski, and is the very design rocker is "reversing." By pressuring down on the camber, skiers exert pressure and control — out to the ski's tail and tip.

Though some skis are built with only reverse camber or no camber, most new skis use some combination of rocker and camber as they seek the perfect blend of float and flex.

Width

Even with all of that flexing and floating going on, a ski's width and sidecut still figure into the triumvirate of any design's most important ingredients. A ski's waist width — measured directly underfoot — still seems to be the most reliable barometer of what kind of terrain it is designed to hit.

Narrower skis are typically built for hardpack and lift-served conditions, where smoother surfaces make it easier to roll from edge to edge.

Fatter skis provide stability and a wider platform to even out the inconsistencies of deeper snow, especially in the windblown or wetter stuff.

Sidecut

Sidecut, a.k.a. profile or shape, is a means of measuring the difference in a ski's width at the tip, waist and tail. Sidecut is frequently described as sidecut radius.

Imagine extending the arc of a ski's sidecut into a full circle. The radius of that circle is called a ski's "sidecut radius."

The smaller the radius, the sharper the turn — the more quickly a ski can turn, maintaining a shorter arc.

On the flipside, the less sidecut a ski has — or the larger the radius — the more comfortable it will feel in a longer or more relaxed turn radius.

more TERMS

Core Construction

Ski manufacturers can radically alter a ski's weight and performance by using any number of wood, foam, metal and fiberglass layers between the ski's base and its topsheet. Foam cores tend to result in a lighter ski. Metal laminates tend to result in a stiffer ski. Heavier woods can contribute to a damper, more durable core, while lighter woods can improve a ski's spring and flex.

Cap Construction

Cap construction, in which the top layer of the ski "caps" the core materials from edge to edge, is often used in less expensive ski production. In many top-level skis, the materials are layered like a "sandwich." A mix can provide a combination of the torsional rigidity of a sidewall combined with the weight and cost savings of a cap.

Bottom Line

There is a wealth of new skis hitting the slopes aimed at improving your experience. And while it's easy to get caught up in all the terminology, it's more fun to focus on the benefits. Check out the latest skis at onthesnow.com.

If you've still got doubts, get out and try a couple pairs yourself. You'll be glad you did. ◆

SNOW INDUSTRY bulletin

exciting CHANGES for skiers in the west

Excerpted from saminfo.com

Skiing & Climate Change

Climate change is serious business for the ski industry—without snow, there won't be much of an industry left. It is one of the first industries to visibly suffer from climate change as there's less reliable snow in recent years. It foreshadows the impact that many industries will experience, such as tourism, hospitality and retail. 108 ski areas from around the U.S. have signed the Climate Declaration, which urges Congress to address climate change

Vail Resorts Cuts Staff

Following taking over management of Canyons Resort, Vail Resorts has laid off 42 full-time Canyons employees as it consolidates staff at Canyons. Many of them were at the department manager level or higher. Vail Resorts recently signed a lease agreement to manage.

Mammoth hosts Olympic Teams

The United States Ski and Snowboard Association (USSA) has named Mammoth Mountain as its official training ground for the nation's Olympic freeskiing and snowboarding hopefuls ahead of the Sochi 2014 Games. The California ski resort will play host to spring and fall training camps for athletes, including the likes of world champions Ted Ligety and Mikaela Shiffrin, through to 2019 meaning it will also be used by snowsport stars for the Pyeongchang 2018 Winter Olympics

Royal Gorge Tram

A 3,200-acre wildfire last week destroyed much of the Royal Gorge Bridge and Park. The iconic suspension bridge survived largely intact, along with several more recent additions, including the park's skycoaster and zipline. But the park's aerial tram was destroyed, along with 48 of the park's 52 structures.

Mt. Norguay, Canada

Mt. Norquay, Banff, Alberta, has received approval from Parks Canada for a long-range improvement plan for summer and winter operations. The plan calls for widening of trails, renovating the Cliff House lodge and adding an observation deck, and creating a cable-assisted summer hiking trail

Breckenridge Expansion

Vail Resorts has begun construction on 543 acres of new terrain in the Peak 6 area of Breckenridge Ski Resort. The Peak 6 project will include 400 acres of lift-served terrain and 143 acres of hike-to terrain. They expect to open the new terrain for the 2013-2014 ski season, including adding a new high-speed, six-person chairlift and a new fixed-grip chairlift to access the Peak 6 area.

Mammoth Restructures

Rusty Gregory, the CEO and chairman of Mammoth Mountain, CA, announced a new leadership team effective immediately as the resort hopes to better align the organization to execute key strategies aimed at improving guest experience, communicating the brand and growing visitation to Mammoth Mountain, June Mountain and the region.

Snow Summit for Sale

The Snow Summit Ski Corporation board of directors in southern California has retained an international investment banking firm to market the company, with the possibility of selling it to one of a number of interested buyers. The corporation owns and operates both Snow Summit and Bear Mountain at Big Bear Lake, which average more than 700,000 visits annually.

Bitterroot Plan in Montana

The U.S. Forest Service is considering would-be developer Tom Maclay's latest proposal to build a destination ski resort on the Bitterroot and Lolo national forests. The Forest Service agreed to a first-stage screening on June 26, and has 60 days to determine if the proposal meets the agency's criteria to formally start the application process and initiate a full environmental analysis.

SKI INDUSTRY bulletin

GLOBAL WARMING effects skiing The ski industry is taking climate change seriously and looking for solutions

Global warming is no joke. We have already seen some effects on our ski areas and if the trend continues, it will force many ski areas to close. Many of the ski areas at risk may not close today or even in our lifetime, but if the trend isn't reversed more resorts will be at risk.

So far, the affected ski areas are mostly smaller ones that cannot afford snowmaking equipment. Rising snowlines means fewer days a resort is open and less affordable it is to keep the resort open.

Snowmaking will not ultimately be the answer. Water needed for increased snowmaking may be harder to come by and higher temperatures may not even allow for snowmaking.

According to a recent 2012 report from the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), if current levels of greenhouse gas emissions continue, temperatures on the already warming planet might rise by anywhere between 4°F and 10°F. Ski seasons will get shorter, snow levels will move higher, and the 38 U.S. states with ski industries will lose $1 billion in revenue and 27,000 jobs because of decreasing snow.

Aspen has been a leader in protecting the environment. They recently invested $5.5 million to develop the first large coalmine methane-to-electricity project in the U.S. They developed the ski industry's first climate policy and committed to reducing their carbon dioxide emissions by 25% by 2020 from their 2000 levels.

Mammoth Mountain, California, has embarked on an energy revamp in recent years. Since 2000, the ski area has reduced electricity needs by 9 percent and cut propane use by 70,000 gallons per year, thus using less energy than it did in the past.

Sundance on December 6, 2012 waiting for snow so they could open. Photo by Steve Griffin / The Salt Lake Tribune

The ski industry is taking climate change seriously, and is looking for solutions. National Ski Areas Association (NSAA) adopted a climate change policy in 2002, pushing member resorts to inventory their emissions of greenhouse gases, retrofit buildings to be more energy efficient and promote mass transit use by guests and employees.

During 2012, more than 100 resorts sent letters to Congress in support of cleanenergy legislation, power plant carbon emissions standards and the wind energy production tax credit.

As a skier, you can make a difference— Write letters to Congress, carpool to the mountains and do whatever it takes to reduce your personal carbon footprint. •

RESORTS at risk

This is what the science is telling us: By 2039, the East Coast ski season will be a full two weeks shorter. The chance of resorts being open for Christmas will be below 75%.

Mountains will be increasingly dependent on snowmaking to get the season up and running, meaning less skiing in the trees, steepening ticket prices as snowmaking costs increase and more hills going out of business.

Out West, high-altitude snowpacks have been in a steady decline, and, like this past season, seasons will shorten, more precipitation will fall as rain and spring melt-off will come earlier.

Chris Daly, director of OSU's Spatial Climate Analysis Service, said a study found that more than half of the ski areas area in the Western Oregon Cascades are at risk. That's because winters in this part of the Northwest would take only a small amount of warming to tip the scales from snow to rain.

Precipitation that falls on the west slope of the cascades as snow (today) is falling near the freezing point. If you increase the temperature just a little bit, you turn that snow to rain.

Among the larger ski areas in the United States, the most at risk are Aspen, CO, and Park City, UT.

By 2100, the snowline at both Aspen and Park City will move up 2,400 feet higher, unless the greenhouse gas emissions such as carbon-dioxide are reduced from current levels.

SKI PASS deals

LIFT PASSES best of the 2013-14 season pass

So many options to choose from for skiing multiple resorts.

It may still be early in the summer, but the ski season will begin at major U.S. resorts in just four months. For those in the know, it may well be a cheaper and easier ski season than ever before.

The general concept is to combine mountains that would typically be skied in more than one trip, and even resorts under different ownership, into one pass. This new generation of ski passes is for ski and snowboard travelers, and many are good deals for those doing as few as two ski trips – or one long trip – even for skiers living thousands of miles from the slopes.

With more resorts in more places, from Michigan to California to Europe and South American, Vail's Epic Pass has long been the 800-pound gorilla of the ski world.

BIG SKY

acquires Moonlight Basin to form the largest ski resort in the US

The winter of 2013-14 marks the 40th anniversary of Big Sky Resort, the concept of the late NBC newscaster and Montana native Chet Huntley.

Under the ownership of Boyne Resorts since 1976, Big Sky has seen hundreds of millions of dollars of significant improvements, from building a conference center, expanding terrain, additions and upgrades of lifts, lodging, employee housing and commercial centers, to building the relevant utilities infrastructure.

A barometer of the real estate recovery is exemplified by phase five of the popular Powder Ridge Cabins released in December 2011: as of summer 2013, it had nearly sold out of the 15 units available. Through its responsible growth, Big Sky Resort stays financially viable and a reliable employer and community partner.

Big Sky's professional meeting and catering staff and facilities have enabled them to host such high-profile guests as President Obama and family, Vice President Biden and the 1000-attendee international trade conference Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperative (APEC).

Skiers and snow-boarders have enjoyed the collaboration with Moonlight Basin to form the nation's largest ski complex with 5750 acres and 4,350 vertical feet.

Summer vacationers now have the Big Sky Resort Basecamp to Yellowstone activity center from which to launch unique adventures such as the Lone Peak Expedition: tram to the top and numerous ziplines, ropes courses, shooting sports and children's activities.

KIDS' korner

GOOD STUFF for the kids & grandkids

Teaching children to water ski

Some of my best days on the water have been witnessing a child getting up on skis for the first time. The expression of excitement on their face is priceless.

But to a child, the thought of being pulled behind a boat on skis for the first time can be frightening. You don't want to force a child into skiing before they are ready. Even when they say they want to ski but you may get them in the middle of the river and they won't even go into the water. Children have to be confident and want to learn.

So instead of trying to talk them into skiing we practice getting the kids to jump off the swim step and into the deep water with an adult to catch them.

2-year-old Brooke on the horseshoe ski being towed in the shallow water on our beach.

Start On Dry Land

The first thing we do when a child thinks they want to ski is to practice on dry land. We put them on our horseshoe ski and give them the ski handle attached to the ski and drag them around for a while. We talk them through what is happening and explain to them about balance.

3-year-old Danielle being towed on an inflatable ski trainer.

Keep Them On Their Toes

We attempt to keep their weight on their balls of their feet. This has the effect of keeping them off their heels and consequently off their butts. It is virtually impossible for someone to keep their arms straight when the sensation of falling backwards occurs. Having the weight on the balls of the feet makes it much more difficult to fall backward. Now, as long as the knees are bent the child is not only more stable but it also gives them better control of the ski for maneuvering.

4-year-old Jacqueline skiing on an inflatable ski trainer.

Getting in the Water

Drill into the child's head these important things. Keep your knees bent and together, head up, shoulders back, and arms straight. If they do not get it right the first couple of times, do not get upset with them. Patience is needed.

We tend to start most kids on a towable or the kneeboard. They can just hang on while we pull them slowly behind the boat.

When they are ready to start skiing have an adult get in the water. Help them get their skis pointed forward, and hold the tails of the skis down as the driver begins the pull. If they are unsuccessful, you are right there to help them get started again. If they get up, just hang out in the water until the boat returns and stay visible to other boaters.

10-year-old Bailey being towed on the kneeboard and having a blast.

We do not attach the rope to the tow bar right away but have someone in the boat hold it. This way, the child can start on a shorter rope and we can lengthen the rope slowing. Also when a child falls they do not want to let go of the rope. This way you can release it and reduce the risk of injury.

Make Them A Star

Try video taping the child skiing. They will get a kick out of seeing themselves on the tube, and this is a great way to show them what they are going right.

FAR WEST ski convention

Pac Rim scores a first place for newsletter & club and a second for web site.

The 81th annual Far West convention took place in Reno, NV, June 6-9, 2013.

Pac Rim Wins

It was a great convention for Pacific Rim as we were given first in the Tollakson Award for best AA Far West Club. Pac Rim's "Update" newsletter was given a first place Wentworth award. And finally Pac Rim's website earned a second place. Thank you, Catherine, for a job well done and congratulations on the hat trick.

Far West Silent Auction

Pacific Rim was represented by attendees John Watson, Catherine Ohl and Gene Fulkerson.

Once again we had lots of fun running around trying to outbid our fellow skiers. We lost most of what we bid on but we did buy a trip to Steamboat & Powerhorn in Colorado. The hardest part will be trying to schedule it in. Thanks goodness for retirement.

We really enjoyed meeting with the special guests. We got to spend a lot of time with them on Friday. We especially enjoyed talking to Candace Cable, Doug Pringle and Wayne Wong. All icons in their own way.

The Convention

Bay Area Council did a fabulous job on the convention. Gene and Catherine were honored to run the Pub Crawl again this year. We visited some awesome establishments in Downtown Reno. Great fun.

The three days went by way too fast. We attended the Awards Luncheon, Awards Dinner Dance and all the parties. It was wonderful to have the time to catch up with old friends in both the ski clubs and the industry. We especially enjoyed Candace Cable's keynote speech.

2014 Far West Convention

The 2014 Far West convention will be hosted by the Northwest Ski Club Council to be held in beautiful Bend, OR on June 12-15, 2014. We plan to go and make a week of it. There's so many fun things to do in this area. See page 24 for the current convention information. ◆

BIG WHITE spring skiing

The snow was unbelievable for April—light, deep and never ending!

This was our 11th annual April trip to Big White in hopes of catching some of that late season powder. It didn't seem much like spring as it snowed just about every day. And it was still coming down as we departed the resort. Same story but different year.

The highlight of this trip was the awesome snow. The snow was light, deep and never ending. We skied through the trees on Black Forest, the chutes under the Cliff Chair, the groomers off the Ridge Rocket, the powder from the Falcon Chair and around the snowghosts in the Gem Lake area. Gene led the experts out of bounds on Gem Lake.

We also enjoyed dinners out and dinners in, happy hours, free hot chocolate and a bonfire at Happy Valley, recovery time in the hot tub, good friends and new friends, the tube park, Ladies' day on the mountain, mountain tours, sunrises and sunsets, daily pastries from the Big White Bakery and the beauty of Big White.

The skiing was absolutely awesome! There was fresh powder every day and everlasting powder in the trees. Many days the groomed had up to a couple of inches of untracked. The fact that the temperatures remained in the high 20s was our only indications of spring.

Standing: Pat, John, Joe, Gene, Mark. Sitting: Fay, RC, Arline, Linda

Arline, Joe and RC enjoying more fresh powder.

The tree skiing was absolutely awesome. With so much new snow, it's where we spent most of our time on skis.

Dinner at the Globe—Pat, Fay, Catherine, Arline, John, Mark, Linda.

SAFETY– early detection of head trauma Keeping your head in the game

In sports, impacts are a part of the game. CHECKLIGHTTM alerts athletes, coaches, athletic trainers and parents to the severity of impacts.

CHECKLIGHT™ Benefits Include—

- Consistent, reliable and actionable impact data
- Sensors that are directly coupled to the head to reflect direct accelerations that the head, not a helmet or chin strap, experiences
- Can be worn with and without a helmet in multiple activities
- Easy to use and comfortable to wear
- · Logs the total number of impacts recorded

What the Lights Mean During Activity—

- YELLOW blinking indicated a moderate impact
- RED blinking indicates a more severe impact
- GREEN blinking indicates no impact.

Skiing is a dance in which the mountain always leads.

About Pacific Rim

Pacific Rim Alliance is all about skiing. We were formed with the express notion of never having to attend a meeting.

Originally we were all about skiing exotic resorts in Europe, South America and New Zealand. These have been scaled back due to the weak economy. We are now resuming them.

We have gotten into the groove of running early and late season ski weeks to Big White Ski Resorts in Canada. These trips run about $700 per person and include hotel lodging (double occupancy), 6-day lift ticket, ground transfer from/to the Kelowna airport and various parties. We believe that Big White offers the best and most consistent early and late snow.

We do not offer Mammoth trips since there are so many ski clubs in both the Los Angeles Council and San Diego Council that offer quality affordable bus trips to Mammoth. Just ask and we'll direct you.

We believe in giving back to our ski community.

- Our major fund raiser is our annual wine maker dinner for Can DO MS. To date we have raised more than $34,000.
- We encourage members to participate in other on-snow fund raisers for so many good causes— Hope on the Slopes (for cancer), Ski to Defeat ALS, USARC Ski-athon (for adaptive skiers) and the Jimmie Heuga Vertical Express (for Can Do MS.)
- We also support junior racers (through the Far West Ski Foundation), Women's Ski Jumpers USA and the Unrecables.

Official Documents

We are a 503(c)7 not-for-profit corporation founded in 1997 and incorporated in the state of Nevada. We file a Form 990 yearly. A currently copy of our Bylaws and Articles of Incorporation can be found via a link on our home page.

Liability waiver are required for membership on all trips and events. Trip waivers are included in trip packages mailed out to all participants.

Skiing History

We have a collection of skiing history of ski clubs, councils, the Far West Ski Association and ski resorts in the west. It is a work in progress updated regularly by our Club historian. If you have any history you would like to share, contact Catherine Ohl at ohl@acatmeowz.com. Visit our web site at pacificrimalliance.org/history/html.
