Current Status

Well a bunch of changes have popped up in the past few months. We have worked diligently to keep the status quo. We've been out of the country (off and on) for the past two months so it's been a challenge.

Our tour operator changed companies. So after a new round of bids, we too changed companies.

Our original bid was quoted at an exchange rate of 0.76 Euros. Unfortunately, the USD has been dropping against the Euro so the new pricing is based on 0.73 Euros.

Our hotel in Sestriere remains unchanged at the 4-star Hotel Cristallo with breakfast and dinner included.

Many of the hotels & businesses in Cinque Terre do not open until Spring. The new option is to stay in Rapallo at the 4-star Hotel Europa. Rapallo is about 90 km [56 miles] from Cinque Terre and 5 km [3 miles] from Portofino. To go from Rapallo to Cinque Terre, we'll take the train to Riomaggiore, the farthest village, which takes about an hour.

Swiss Air

We are recommending that participants purchase their own air. You must be on the Swiss air flight from Zurich to/from Milan so that you can catch up with our ground transportation. Flights are as follows—

San Francisco (SFO)

Sestrière

Sestrière is a comune (municipality) in the Province of Turin. It is 17 km (11 miles) from the French border. Its name derives from Latin: ad petram sistrariam, which means sixty Roman miles from Turin.

Sestrière sits at the heart of one of Europe's biggest ski areas known as the Via Lattea (Milky Way). There are 146 skiable pistes, which together total 400 km of runs, of which 120 are provided with artificial snow. Sestriere is also one of the few resorts where it is possible to ski at night on a floodlit run.

Sestrière regularly hosts Alpine Ski World Cup events but its biggest moment came when it was chosen as the center for the alpine events in the 2006 Winter Olympic Games and the Winter Paralympics, hosting all the women's and men's alpine skiing competitions and being the site of one of the three Olympic Villages.

The two hotel towers that dominate the skyline have become the symbol of the village. They were built in the 1930s by FIAT's founder Giovanni Agnelli to provide a holiday retreat for the workers in the FIAT factory down in Turin. One of these towers was part of the Olympic village housing the competitors.

historical center, and good seafood restaurants. Don't miss the funicular ride up the hill to Montallegro.

Rapallo is on the Italian Riviera in the Liguria region of northwest Italy. It's in the Tigullio Gulf between Genoa and the popular Cinque Terre. Rapallo makes a good base for visiting the rest of the Italian Riviera and Cinque Terre as it's well connected.

Rapallo is on the coastal rail line that runs from Ventimiglia (near the French border) to Rome. The train station is centrally located.

Funivia Ride to Montallegro

The spectacular ride up the hill to Montallegro on the funivia takes eight minutes. It leaves every half hour between 9:00 - 12:00 and 2:00pm - 5:00pm from Piazza Solari. The cable is 2,349 meters long and ascends 600 meters to Montallegro where there are beautiful views of the gulf and the hills.

At the top is the large Sanctuary of Montallegro, built in 1558 to commemorate a picture left by the Virgin when she appeared to a peasant. Its marble facade was added in 1896. On the walls inside are many offerings, mostly for miracles at sea. There are also two hotels, both with restaurants open for both lunch and dinner. Several hiking trails start from Montallegro.

Cinque Terre

Designated by UNESCO as a World Heritage Site Cinque Terre forms a National Park.

Colorful houses clinging to rocky outcrops overhanging the sea and the terraced vineyards, which produce excellent wines such as Sciacchetrà are part of Cinque Terre's fascinating landscape.

Plan to spend at least a full day visiting Cinque Terre, especially if you are hiking between the villages. When you get off the train at Riomaggiore, you will find a tourist information window outside the station, where you can ask for a map. If you want to do the hike, you will climb some stairs to the starting point, where you will buy your ticket (€5).

Before starting the hike, be sure to visit this fascinating village. You can either take a short walk through the tunnel from the train station or wander around the side of the cliff, which offers a spectacular view of the harbor and sea. If you have difficulty with stairs, be sure to take the tunnel. For a treat, stop for lunch at one of the cafés overlooking the harbor. You can also find picnic fixings in some of the shops and have lunch along the seaside.

If you don't have time to visit all the villages, be sure to make a stop in Vernazza. This scenic village has a lovely harbor and beach, a delightful place to stop at a café for a glass of wine, some ice cream or a meal. You can also climb up the cliff to visit an old castle and enjoy the view of the sea and the town below.

Note that when you buy your train tickets to and from Riomaggiore, you can use them for up to six hours from the time you validate them.

There are the five towns referenced to by 'Cinque Terra.'

Riomaggiore

From the south, Riomaggiore is the closest village to La Spezia, a vibrant and colorful town. The village has narrow streets and pretty buildings that treat visitors with old Italian hospitality and charm and amazing seaside views.

Manarola

One of the best known views of Cinque Terre are the one that are enjoyed on the path that leads to the village of Manarola from Riomaggiore with flourishing undergrowth, sweeping beaches and overhanging rocks. The village of Manarola is peaceful, pleasant and picturesque. It offers a little more cosmopolitan feel with a sprinkle of restaurants and bars overlooking the sea. The pastel colored houses and fishermen boats are just as charming.

Corniglia

The quietest village in Cinque Terre is Corniglia and it is the only one that is located above the sea level. This beautiful village offers locals a private hideaway as it is sheltered high. This little gem can be reached by the bus or the train after a challenging walk.

Vernazza

Vernazza is known to be the most captivating, bustling and bright of all the Cinque Terre villages. It offers waterfront cafes, quaint shops and a small harbor filled with immense charm.

Vernazza has a very casual, elegant and jovial atmosphere and is the perfect location to enjoy a delicious lunch or just sit and enjoy the postcard style breath-taking views.

Monterosso al Mare

The last in the Cinque Terre villages is the village of Monterosso al Mare, the most modernized and the largest of all five villages. It is the only village in the region that resembles a resort town and this is where the most beautiful beaches and the finest hotels can be found. Monterosso is known for its beautiful seaside promenade, its innumerable gelato parlors, its uphill streets and its trinket stalls that make an evening walk pleasurable.

Portofino

Portofino is a little more cosmopolitan than the Cinque Terra region but does not lose its rustic Italian feel. There is a reason this town is so popular and visited by so many, a quaint little fishing village tucked in the hillside, which is dotted with colorful buildings – it had every one with their camera capturing its beauty.

The town itself is filled with restaurants and amongst the cobbled streets there is plenty of opportunity to shop – but bring your credit card – some of the most popular designers have outlets here.

If you want to head out of the town for a nice walk or run there is a great footpath that runs along the coast into the next town of Santa Margarita. There are a couple of beaches along the way with cafes and bars and in Santa Margarita itself there is a small marina and some larger more commercial stores.

Travel Tips

- Cafés and restaurants in Italy have a cover charge for table service. The fee is generally about €1.50 per person, but runs around €3 in some places like Portofino, a more popular spot on the Italian Riviera. In fact, everything in Portofino costs a lot more, so if you're trying to save money, don't plan to eat here.
- Be sure to stroll up the hill above Portofino to visit the Church of St. George and Castello Brown. If you still have any energy, hike out to the lighthouse.
- Buying train tickets in smaller Italian towns can be a challenge if you don't speak the language. If you're lucky, you can find another person in line that speaks English and will help you translate. Otherwise, you can write down the name of the town where you're going. If the ticket window is closed, you can use the machine, which offers information in English, but you will need a credit card with chip and PIN technology.
- Before boarding the train, you must validate your ticket by placing it in the small device usually found just outside the ticket office. If you present a ticket that hasn't been validated to the conductor, you could be thrown off the train and face an expensive fine.
- Be sure to try pansotti cum salsa di noci, a specialty of the Ligurian region recommended by someone who grew up in the area. It's a mild ravioli-like pasta with walnut sauce, and it's delicious.
